"Dance with Dolphins; Escape with Whales"

Sri Lanka is situated within the International Whaling Commission's protected zone in the Indian Ocean. Of the 80 species of cetaceans identified worldwide, 26 are found in the Indian Ocean and the Bay of Bengal. Whale and dolphin watching is a seasonal activity in Sri Lanka dependent on the two monsoon seasons that affect the island at opposing times of the year.

Dondra Point / Mirissa

Research findings confirmed by many experts in the field of cetology confirm that the deep water off Sri Lanka's southernmost point - Dondra Head - is one of the best locations in the world for seeing blue and sperm whales together. Sea turtles and dolphins in pods numbering a hundred or more are also spotted frequently accompanying the boat.

Kalpitiya

Although whales are not as frequently sighted off Kalpitiya as they are at Dondra, it is one of the best places in Sri Lankan waters to see a great many species of acrobatic dolphins. If you are at the right place at the right time, the spinner dolphins of Kalpitiya will give a dazzling show in their hundreds as they leap in and out of view to keep you entertained for hours.

Our boat trips are conducted day during the west and southern coast season (November to April), and at other eastern locations (June to September) on request.
